President's Report

This evening I welcome you all back to Leichhardt Oval after a long break. I especially welcome the directors, coaches and players from West Adelaide.

This afternoon a special Panagiri Festival is being held at Leichhardt followed by a friendly match between our youth/colts composite side and our friends from the Australia-Chinese Soccer Association. In that regard I also welcome representatives from ACSA including Mr Stephen Lee, Mr Gary Ha and Mr Victor Chan. I also welcome representatives from the Spastic Society of NSW who will be selling badges at the ground as part of cerebral palsy awareness week.

I and all my fellow directors are very proud of the efforts made by the coaching staff and players so far this season. I welcome three new players to the team, George Vallas, Ivan Zelic and Alistair Edwards, who have already settled into the team very well. I also thank Scott Baillie for his contribution to the Club. Scott played eight Ericsson Cup games and three Johnnie Walker Cup games for us. Many will remember his deadly header against Morwell just before Christmas. I wish Scott all the best in his return to the MacArthur Rams.

Finally, it is great to see Derek Poimer back in the team after knee surgery. Derek's determination and desire to play again and his return with two goals in his first two games epitomises the Club's spirit this year.

Coach's Report

Well it is nice to be finally playing a home game after four away games. This is our first home game of 1996 and we hope to carry on our good home record.

Today we welcome West Adelaide to Leichhardt Oval. Raul Blanco brings with him a very talented squad of players, but they will be missing Robbie Hooker as we will be missing Milan Blagojevic who will both be on international duty against Sweden.

It has been great to see the form of the young players in our club over the last three games. Ivan Zelic, Ralph Bove, George Valas and Con Paradisis have all been part of the first team squad in that period. They have acquitted themselves well in away games against South Melbourne, Sydney United and Marconi. They won't come up against many better teams and they all did well.

Another huge bonus for the club over the last two weeks has been the successful return of Derek Poimer to the first team. Derek has worked particularly hard since having a knee reconstruction in September. Derek has not only played well, but has scored in each of the last two games. The other two players who are on the injury list are George Sorras and Chris Slater who should be back playing in two weeks. So hopefully we will have a full list of players to select from soon.

A player who deserves a special mention is Kris Trajanovski who has scored eight goals in our last five games. Not only has he been in great goalscoring form, but his general game has been very good and he now must be very close to getting a run in the national team.

The players and I would like to thank all the supporters for their great support over the last two away games and the way they have lifted the team.

— DAVID RATCLIFFE

After spending four seasons with Parramatta Eagles, Adam Ciantar moved to UTS Olympic this year. Already Adam has proved to be a key defender and integral part of the team. In the game against Sydney United two weeks ago Adam saved two balls off the line and was duly awarded Ericsson man of the match award.

The number three defender is playing the best football of his life which he attributes to his talented team-mates and excellent coaching staff.

Recently Adam appeared on Radio 2NBC FM90.1 on Olympic's regular Thursday evening show at 9.30pm. Many callers rang asking for more appearances by him which only goes to show what a popular player he is both on and off the field.

Go Casual for a Cause

If you are tired of dressing for success, break the corporate code or school uniform code and Go Casual for a Cause on March 1st, 1996.

Go Casual for a Cause is a fundraising initiative in support of the Spastic Centres of Australia ... so abandon your stockings, pinstripes or ties and join thousands of other Australians in dressing casually on March 1st, 1996.

In exchange for a $2 or $5 badge, employees in participating businesses and students in participating schools will go to work/school in their favourite casual clothes, or alternatively I Would If I Could Go Casual badges are available.

Go Casual for a Cause is an opportunity for office workers and school students to come together for a worthwhile cause and have fun at the same time. It's a win-win situation for everyone — employees and students get a morale boost, businesses and schools have the opportunity to display community pride and funds are raised in support of Australians with cerebral palsy.

Buy your badge at Leichhardt oval today or during the week from any NIB branch or Athlete's Foot store. Your support may also lead to you jetting off to the Orient. When you buy a $5 badge, you are eligible to enter a fabulous five night Singapore Airlines holiday to Singapore and Phuket. So ... don't be shy, dare to be different and make a difference!

Casual for a Cause was first conducted in the United States in 1990 and in 1993 ten-thousand companies participated. In Australia, in its debut, hundreds of companies and schools have already accepted the challenge.

The inaugural Go Casual for a Cause co-incides with National Cerebral Palsy Week (February 26, 1996-March 3, 1996) a week in which we recognise the achievements of people with cerebral palsy and a week in which we endeavour to broaden community knowledge about disabilities and breakdown some of the barriers of misunderstanding.

Cerebral palsy is a term describing a collection of disorders affecting posture and movement resulting from damage to or lack of development in the part of the brain controlling movement. Cerebral refers to the brain. Palsy can mean weakness or lack of muscle control.

Cerebral palsy continues to be the most common physical disability in childhood and effects an estimated one in every 400 babies in Australia.

Australia has moved forward removing barriers for people with cerebral palsy in our community. Most children with cerebral palsy now live at home with their families and many attend their local school and are involved in local recreational activities. Many adults live independently and work in open employment.

The Spastic Centres of Australia provide care and services for children and adults with cerebral palsy and their families. Services are provided to enable people with cerebral palsy to live, work and participate as much as possible in their local community.

Services and programs provided by The Spastic Centre include: Adult Resource Programs; Assistive Device Service; CENTEC Services; Conductive Education; Country Infant Service; Day Options for Adults; Early Childhood Programs; Employment, Training and Placement; Hydrotherapy; Information and Advisory Service; Living Skills Training; Medical Consultancy; Recreation and Volunteer Support; Respite Care; Specialist Clinics and Dental Unit; Staff Development; School Age Programs; Supported Accommodation; Therapy, Social Work and Psychology Services.

If you are able to help by dressing casually on March 1st, 1996, selling badges or spreading the word to your employer or local school, please contact The Spastic Centre of New South Wales on (02) 451 9022.

Whistle Stop

by PHIL HAFEY

There is a variety of overseas football shown every week on 'free to air' and 'pay' television and viewers are treated to many different playing styles and approaches. Referees view these matches and, like players and spectators, ask the question, "Why didn't the referee take the same action as the referees in the Ericsson Cup do?"

There are many examples including:

- the mandatory caution for the sliding tackle that misses the ball and trips the opponent,

- the sending off of players who prevent obvious goal-scoring opportunities,

- players having their shirts tucked in,

- the wearing of 'bike-pants' of different colour to the shorts,

- players encoaching at the taking of a penalty kick,

- the enforcement of the 10 years at free kicks and action against players who delay restarts.

Referees in Australia do enforce the Laws of the Game as required by FIFA. We believe that is what we are required to do, whether or not we believe the changes imposed by FIFA are in the best interests of the game.

There is considerable discussion in England about the direction the game is taking and some referees appear to take the law into their own hands and ignore the FIFA directives. This attitude is not in the best interests of the game and merely causes problems for other officials, both in England and abroad. In fact, some referees refuse to watch English football because it teaches too many bad habits!

The reports from referee assessors indicate that the refereeing in the Ericsson Cup is, in general, of a very high standard and that the referees are conforming to the guidelines as laid down by FIFA. Just because the referee is officiating in the English Premier League or Italy's Serie A, does not make them right and the Ericsson Cup referee wrong. In most instances, including those listed above, it is the Australian who is right.

QUESTIONS:

1. Whilst the game is in progress a ball from a nearby field hits the match ball as a player is about to kick it. The referee should:
 - (a) Stop play and restart with a drop-ball
 - (b) Allow play to continue
2. In a junior game the Blue #9 takes the kick-off and the ball travels forward 2 metres. No other player attempts to play the ball so the Blue #9 kicks the ball again. The referee should:
 - (a) Allow play to continue
 - (b) Stop play and retake the kick
 - (c) Stop play and award an indirect free kick against the Blue #9

1. a, the ball from the other field is considered an outside agent and is the same as a spectator or dog etc.
2. c, at any restart (except a drop-ball) the kicker, or thrower, is not permitted to play the ball twice.

Tribute to Wanda Jamrozik

It was a very sad day when we heard of the sudden death of journalist Wanda Jamrozik in January this year. Wanda was a sports journalist with the Australian and delighted her huge reading audience with her wit, humour and insightful prose. Wanda was also a fan of UTS Olympic and came to every home game and many away games wearing the navy blue strip. In November last year Wanda wrote a beautiful piece for blues News which we have reproduced below. We miss Wanda very much and have been fortunate to know her.

"A DAY AT THE FOOTY" by WANDA JAMROZIK

Aunty Win knitted our jumpers. She was my mother's elder sister and a dab hand with the needles. Not too ambitious they never seemed to sit quite right on the few occasions she ventured into fairisle territory – but incredibly big and warm I think we appreciated them most when we went to the soccer.

We always stood on the terraces. Usually it was just my dad and myself though sometimes one or both of my older brothers would come along for a game. I can't remember when they didn't join us more often. They both liked soccer. They both played for their school teams, the elder in particular slogging away at it for years, right through university, despite having all the natural grace and talent of a two-day-old foal trying to do gymnastics. Strictly a third team proposition, he was, but dedicated – crickey, in his own way he made Kenny Rosewall look like an underachiever.

Maybe that's what they were doing my brothers, playing soccer on those wintry afternoons in the early dawn of the seventies. Playing it rather than watching Polonia carry the standard high for emigre Poles in Adelaide soccer's first division. But I doubt it. More likely they were already up to whatever it is teenage boys get up to that younger sisters are forbidden, on pain of arms twisted up your back to breaking point, from observing, much less participating in. It was always cold, standing there, teeth gritted, through interminable reserves games, both of us rugged up in jackets and scarves while a lazy wind surgically picked its way through every single one of Aunty Win's stitches.

I don't know why we kept to the terraces. Maybe it cost too much for seats in the grandstand. Or maybe there weren't any grandstands. I certainly can't remember any; just uneven grass pitches surrounded by four or five low, concrete terraces and maybe a row of dilapidated wooden benches. Soccer was, after all, a sport condemned by its ethnic associations to an eternity of hopeless amateurism, of fund-raising raffles and borrowed equipment. The facilities and the grounds were accordingly crappy.

And, yes it was ethnic. It was woggy to the core. You hardly heard English being spoken on the terraces. Half the time the matches were like ethnic wars in miniature as the various national groups used soccer to pick at the scabs that barely covered the generations of conflict living and breathing in their collective psyches. Soccer was the vehicle for catharsis, an excuse for atavistic wallowing in grudges and glories that stretched back to the Bronze Age or beyond.

I think I learnt most of my 20th-century European history at those games, listening as my father explained in gruesome detail the subtleties of exactly why it was that Hellas supporters would slaughter their Turkish rivals given half a chance, or why Serb/Croat fixtures were to be avoided at all costs, or why we Polonia fans were obliged to turn out in force whenever our team was drawn against the German side.

The rest of the time I trailed obediently along after him, trying to conceal my impatience when he ran into someone else he knew and embarked on yet another interminable conversation in a language I mostly couldn't understand.

There was always a lot of walking because you had to pick your post in the crowd with care. The trick was to flick your eyes once over every knott and clump of people, searching for a glimpse of the red and white of Poland. If that was present, you could be sure of your physical safety. The last thing you wanted was to draw breath from letting rip with some particularly vile, bigoted stream of invective, only to realise, as the people in the immediate vicinity abruptly came back into focus, that you were standing in the middle of a large and heavily muscled group of your victim's compatriots.

Not a good feeling, that. Not unless the surge of adrenaline that comes with intestine-curdling terror is your bag. You wouldn't be there at the soccer if you didn't know for a fact that people had died for less.

It's the heightened emotions that have stayed sharpest in my memory; the screaming indignation you felt when one of your star players was cut down behind play by some neanderthal defender; the rage when a referee stupidly awarded a penalty on the strength of an obviously faked dive; or the thrill of an intercept that sparked a wonderfully creative attacking move. Beautiful. Miraculous. Divine.

Clearest of all, I remember the shock of unexpected tears one miserable afternoon when, late in a tense, close-fought game, Polonia out of the blue, suddenly scored. Everyone around us going crazy with joy. I couldn't help it; they just came gushing out whether I liked it or not. The fading light, the freezing wind, everywhere strangers shouting and stamping and my cheeks wet with pre-adolescent, patriotic tears.

"Development Corner"

by LAKI KONISTIS

I sincerely hope you all enjoyed the school holidays and I'm sure you're all glad to be back at school...

UTS Olympic's Development Program last month saw the club co-ordinate some really special visits: namely to the

- Spastic Centre of NSW (Balmain Support Unit) and*
- Quadriplegic Association of Australia*

Another highlight was the club's presence at the Australia Day Council's celebrations held at Carss Bush Park (January 26th).

UTS Olympic's stall was one of the most popular at the Redfern Fair staged by South Sydney Council late in 1995.

Hundreds of children present joined in the fun of the soccer coaching clinic which was arranged.

Dont' forget...

Your own school too can have the pleasure of a UTS Olympic's Development Team visit.
